

Two emitting components: young-star A and residual D
Illustration, not a fit; residual D is continuously powered, not fossil glow

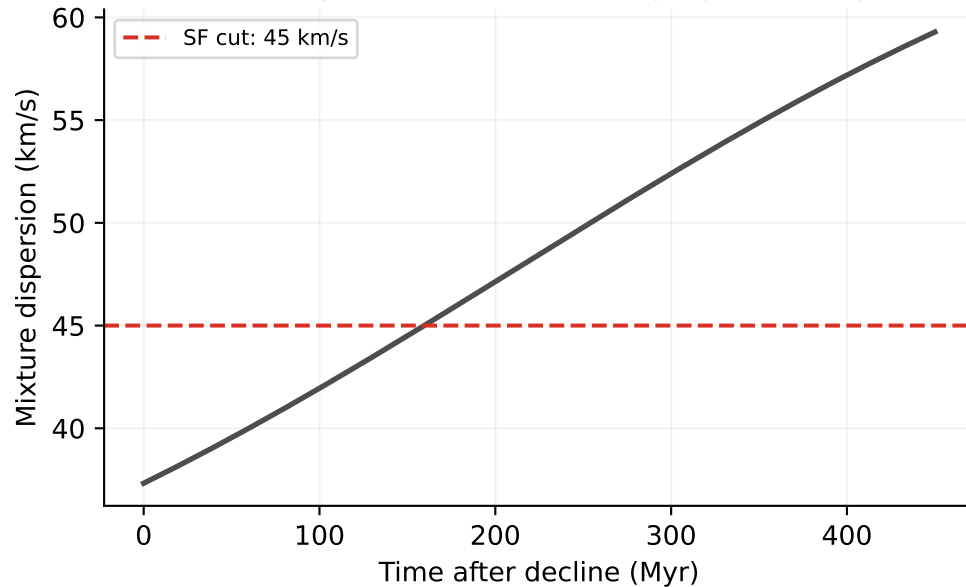

Every line becomes fainter

The residual template sets the direction

Fixed component widths; changing flux weights

The same continuum outlives bright HII emission

